Heathcote appears to have had several building campaigns. The form completed in 1968 states that a large frame building was constructed in the eighteenth century. The house as it now stands is five bays wide, and two-1/2 stories tall. There is one 2-story addition on the east side of the building, and a smaller 2-story addition has been incorporated into the southern portion of the building. The roof is a side gable building with a high, center gable that recalls the "Gothic Revival" style which would have been more popular around the 3rd quarter of the nineteenth century. The windows are two over two, except on the first floor front, where they are 3 over 3. The lower facade is protected by a hipped roof full front porch, and the roof is supported by chamfered posts. The building is eligible for the National Register under Criterion C, architecture. Although the original form indicates associations with a person who was importantant in the 18th century, nothing about the building appears to be related to Nathaniel Heathcote. Therefore the building is not eligible under Criterion B. Research did not indicate associations under Criterion A and no research was conducted under Criterion D.

CAPSULE SUMMARY

BA-0238

Heathcote

7027 Mount Vista Road

Kingsville, Baltimore County

Ca. 1898

Private

The property known as Heathcote is located at 7027 Mount Vista Road between the towns of Kingsville and Germantown in the Eleventh District of Baltimore County, Maryland. Historically, the property was owned by the Quinlan family and was known at the end of the 19th century as Heathcote's Cottage. The Quinlans owned the land as early as 1850, although the house was not constructed until circa 1898. Heathcote, the residence of Emily Quinlan, remained in the Quinlan family until 1919. Emily Quinlan was reportedly the schoolmistress of the nearby Quinlan's School. In 1944, the property was purchased by the Preis family, who remain the owners of the Gothic Revival style dwelling.

Sited on the west corner of the intersection of Belair Road and Mount Vista Road, Heathcote sits back from these roads at the top of a sloping hill that descends to Belair Road to the south of the property. Heathcote is a five-bay wide, double-pile wood frame dwelling clad in vinyl German siding. The side gable roof, which is clad in asphalt shingles, is intersected by a central front gable. The two-and-a-half story Gothic Revival style dwelling sits on a stone foundation, the coursing of which was not visible at the time of the survey. Two central interior stretcher bond brick chimneys rise through the roof. A full-width, one-story porch with a half-hipped roof supported by square wood posts spans the width of the facade. One- and two-story additions extend from the southeast elevation of the building. The dwelling fronts northeast at the end of an asphalt-paved driveway that extends to the southwest and then curves to the west where it terminates at a non-historic garage. Additionally, there are an historic tenant house and a non-historic shed on the grassy property that is heavily foliated with mature trees and shrubs.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Sited on the west corner of the intersection of Belair Road and Mount Vista Road, Heathcote sits back from these roads at the top of a sloping hill that descends to Belair Road to the south of the property. Constructed circa 1898, Heathcote is a five-bay wide, double-pile wood frame dwelling clad in vinyl German siding. The side gable roof, which is clad in asphalt shingles, is intersected by a central front gable. The two-and-a-half story Gothic Revival style dwelling sits on a stone foundation, the coursing of which was not visible at the time of the survey. Two central interior stretcher bond brick chimneys rise through the roof. A full-width, one-story porch with a half-hipped roof supported by square wood posts spans the width of the facade. One- and two-story additions extend from the southeast elevation of the building. The dwelling fronts northeast at the end of an asphalt-paved driveway that extends to the southwest and then curves to the west where it terminates at a non-historic garage. Additionally, there are an historic tenant house and a non-historic shed on the grassy property that is heavily foliated with mature trees and shrubs.

The dwelling and outbuildings were surveyed from public property. As a result, the masonry pattern of the foundation, the window and door surrounds and sills, and the back of the dwelling were not visible at the time of the survey.

EXTERIOR DESCRIPTION

The central entry on the facade, or northeast elevation, features a paneled single-leaf door with three-light sidelights over paneled dado and a divided three-light transom. Four six-light fixed windows flank the entry. Five 2/2 windows pierce the second story of the elevation. One round-arched 2/2 window pierces the peak of the central gable. All of the window openings on the main block have operable louvered wood shutters. The first story of the two-story addition is pierced by one 2/2 vinyl window, while the second story is pierced by two 2/2 vinyl windows. All three windows on this addition have fixed louvered wood shutters. Only one 2/2 vinyl window with operable louvered wood shutters pierces the northeast elevation of the one-story addition.

Three 2/2 windows pierce each of the first two stories of the northwest elevation of the dwelling. The side gable peak features two 2/2 windows. All eight window openings have operable louvered wood shutters. The enclosed two-story inset porch is screened at both the first and second stories.

The southwest elevation was obstructed by foliage and was not completely visible at the time of the survey. The first story of this elevation is pierced by two 8/8 vinyl windows and one three-sided bay window. The first story features three additional window openings, and the second story is pierced by six window openings. The glazing pattern of these nine window openings was not visible at the time of the survey.

The southeast elevation is composed of the main block and the one- and two-story additions to the main block. The two-story addition is pierced at the first story by one 1/1 window with fixed louvered wood shutters. The second story of this addition features a projecting three-sided bay with a central 6/6 window flanked by two 1/1 windows. Two 2/2 windows pierce the one-story addition. The second story of the main block, visible above the one-story addition, is pierced by one 2/2 window with operable louvered wood shutters. The gable peak of the elevation features two 2/2 windows with operable louvered wood shutters.

INTERIOR DESCRIPTION

The interior was not accessible at the time of the survey.

OUTBUILDINGS

Tenant House

The two-story, three-bay wide tenant house is clad in board-and-batten siding. The structure, which dates to circa 1900, has a side gable roof clad in asphalt shingles. Two exterior stretcher bond brick chimneys rise along the gable ends of the building. The facade, or northeast elevation, is pierced by one double-leaf door flanked by two 8/8 windows.

Shed

The circa 1970 wood frame shed is clad in board-and-batten siding and has an asphalt shingle-clad front gable roof. The facade of the structure, which is one bay wide and two bays deep, fronts southeast and was not visible at the time of the survey. The northeast elevation, or side of the building, is pierced by one two-light fixed window.

Garage

The wood frame garage, constructed circa 1970, is two bays wide and one bay deep and features a side gable roof clad in asphalt shingles. The facade, which fronts southeast, is pierced by one paneled roll-up door and two six-light awning windows. Surrounding these windows, the facade is clad in false half-timbering, while the sides and back of the structure are clad in asbestos shingles.

The property known as Heathcote is located at 7027 Mount Vista Road between the towns of Kingsville and Germantown in the Eleventh District of Baltimore County, Maryland. Historically, the property was owned by the Quinlan family and was known at the end of the 19th century as Heathcote's Cottage. The Quinlans owned the land as early as 1850, although the house was not constructed until circa 1898. Heathcote, the residence of Emily Quinlan, remained in the Quinlan family until 1919. Emily Quinlan was reportedly the schoolmistress of the nearby Quinlan's School. In 1944, the property was purchased by the Preis family, who remain the owners of the Gothic Revival style dwelling.

HISTORY

Although the exact date of construction for the house has not been determined, a circa 1898 date is supported by historic deeds, maps, and stylistic embellishments. Leonard G. Quinlan occupied the area near the crossroads of Mount Vista Road and Belair Road as early as 1850, as indicated on the J. C. Sidney Map of Baltimore County. Following his death, the property was willed to his son, Charles H. Quinlan, on October 23, 1874. Although they owned and occupied the land, the house known as Heathcote had not yet been constructed. According to the 1877 Hopkins Atlas, Quinlan owned a house at the northeast corner of the intersection, as well as one further southwest along Belair Road.

These houses were located along Belair Road in the Eleventh District of Baltimore County. Branches of the Gunpowder River, as well as the Bird River penetrate the Eleventh District. These water sources give way to fertile soil for fruit and vegetable production, waterpower for cotton mills, and are an ideal environment for duck hunting. The small town of Kingsville, which is thirteen miles from Baltimore City, is just to the northeast of Heathcote. In 1881, the village was home to 150 residents, an Episcopal Church, a Lutheran Church, and a public school.<sup>1</sup> Germantown, which lay to the southwest of Heathcote, was likewise a developing community in a predominantly rural setting. Between 1850 and the mid-1870s, the Germantown community grew considerably. From the nine residential structures in 1850, the town grew to at least thirty-seven in 1877. At this time, there was a general store, two blacksmith shops, a schoolhouse, three churches, a tavern, and a sawmill in the small settlement.<sup>2</sup>

On March 4, 1898, Charles H. Quinlan's heirs transferred Heathcote to Emily V. Quinlan. Deeds indicate that the property included "Heathcote's Cottage," confirming that the house had been constructed by this time. Emily Quinlan was reportedly the schoolmistress of the nearby "Quinlan's School," which was located across Belair Road.<sup>3</sup> The schoolhouse first appears on the 1915 Bromley Atlas of Baltimore County. Although not listed as "Quinlan's School" on this atlas, the school is located directly across Belair Road from the Quinlan house at the northeast corner of Mount Vista and Belair Roads. Heathcote appears at the northwest corner of the intersection on this map. However, no owner or occupant is recorded.

Constructed of wood frame, the dwelling was designed in the Gothic Revival style, with stylistic detailing tying it specifically to the Carpenter Gothic Revival houses of the last half of the 19th century. Reflective of this style is the steeply pitched center gable with an arched center light. Although introduced to the United States in the 1830s by architect Alexander Jackson Davis, the Carpenter Gothic Revival was popularized during the last half of the 19th century by Andrew Jackson Downing (1815-1852), a landscape architect and promoter of the cottage residence. Downing's Victorian Cottage Residences, published numerous times between 1842 and 1873, touted the advantages of the inexpensive, detached dwelling. He claimed that the English cottage style was "so generally admired for the picturesqueness evinced in its tall gables ornamented by handsome verge-boards and finials... showing how the genius of pointed or Gothic architecture may be chastened or moulded into forms for domestic habitations." Wood frame dwellings with horizontal cladding, as seen on Heathcote, dominated in the Carpenter Gothic Revival style. According to Downing, the setting for cottage residences was particularly important. In keeping with this aspect of the style, Heathcote is set on the rise of a sloping hill surrounded by mature trees, near the Broad Run branch of Big Gunpowder Falls.

On October 16, 1919, Emily V. Quinlan sold the twenty-acre property to Hermann and Edna Spinner. Throughout the following twenty-five years, the property was transferred numerous times, passing through the Peppier, Harper, and Kemler families. On July 10, 1944, John and Rose Kemler sold Heathcote to Kyrle W. and Bessie R. Preis. The acreage of the property has been slightly reduced over the intervening fifty-six years, now totaling sixteen and one-half acres. Despite this reduction in acreage, Heathcote remains in the Preis family.
